“ My name is Kathleen Klavon, and I was one of Peggy’s caregivers. I stayed with her at the Adler center the night before she crossed over. I played her music, and talked to her. Peggy loved to get outside to tend her yard and garden. One of her favorite things to do was go to Silver Diner to have a big cuppa hot chocolate that was covered in whipped cream! When she went to Waltonwoods, I brought her a special cup and made her a homemade cocoa with a can of whipped cream, and it brought her joy. Peggy will be missed! Sending love to your family during this difficult time.

“ I was lucky enough to meet Peggy shortly after Nelson passed away. I began as her companion, but over time we became dear friends. For two and a half years, every Tuesday and Friday afternoon, we ventured out together. She loved shopping at Whole Foods and occasionally Wegmans, always on the lookout for something special — and never one to pass up a Talbots coupon.

Peggy adored flowers. Every spring we would go to Meadow Farms to pick out pink geraniums and impatiens. She was so proud of her home, her yard, and the azaleas she and Nelson had planted over the many years they lived there. Her house was more than a home — it was a reflection of her love and dedication.

For her birthday the past two years, I took her to Clyde's, which she truly enjoyed. Peggy stayed true to her Shenandoah Valley roots and was proud of where she came from. We often drove out to Berryville to Nalls Farm Market to pick up fresh produce, enjoying the simple pleasure of the countryside.

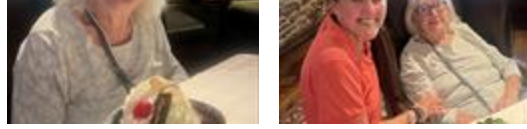

I think her favorite indulgence was chocolate — especially chocolate-covered peanuts and Lindor truffles. She loved the color pink and wore bright colors often. She once told me that when she was little, her father never wanted her mother to wear black, and I think Peggy carried that brightness forward in her own way.

After retirement, she became quite the artist — incredibly talented and proud of her work. She loved reminiscing about her travels to Disney and Palm Springs, sharing stories with sparkle in her eyes.

The last four or five months were extremely hard for Peggy. She missed her home deeply. But most of all, she missed the love of her life, Nelson. I am certain there was a beautiful reunion on the 15th.

I will miss Peggy dearly and will treasure our memories forever. 💕
